

Jörg Althen is language examination administrator and teaches German as a foreign language at vhs Karlsruhe.

He has developed German language curricula for various groups of learners (refugees, computer scientists, engineers) and has taught cultural studies classes at a private university.

Mr. Althen studied cultural anthropology, German and English literature and linguistics in Düsseldorf and Cologne. His fields of interest are mostly transdisciplinary and include cognitive anthropology, ethnology of art, research on mythology and ideology, ethnicity and multiculturalism, literary theory and representations of the other in literature and ethnography. In his masters thesis he explored the interpretive turn of cultural anthropology and the applicability of literary theory to ethnographic writing.